Exciting Session of the Canadian Parliament —Reports of an Insurrection in Cuba said to be False.

NEW YORK, July 11.

A despatch from Ottawa indicates an exciting session of the Canadian Parliament yesterday. The Opposition assailed the Government with great force and effect, and the project of annexation to the United States seems to gain favor.

A Baltimore house of the highest respectability is stated to have received by the steamer Cuba semi-official communications denying the news of an insurrection at Porto Principe, and treated the affair as substantially a canard. The news of the uprising of the blacks, as well as the arrival of the Chilian fleet with 2000 men, is also pronounced false by the same party, who attributes the rumor to the gathering of a few hundred Cubans upon one of the squares of Porto Principe for the purpose of protesting against the present Cabinet and associating themselves in feeling with the revolutionists of Spain.

NARROW ESCAPE. During a severe thunder storm Sunday afternoon, 8th inst., Mrs. Joseph W. Wallace of Hudson, N. H., had an almost miraculous escape from death by a flash of lightning, which stripped a kid shoe from her right foot, split the unfortunate specimen of the cordwainer's handiwork completely open from instep to toe and otherwise essentially demolished it, without materially injuring the wearer, who was in her kitchen engaged in rocking a cradle containing an infant. A little girl stood by her side. Neither of the children were hurt Mr. Wallace was absent attending church. Although Mrs. W. was not stunned in the least, she felt the effects of the sudden visitation for about an hour. A blood blister was raised on one of her little fingers, and her stocking and skirts were somewhat scorched.

The electric fluid descended a lightning rod attached to the body of the house, struck the ground and nearly covered one side of the building to the eaves with mud, ascended through the kitchen floor (tearing up two boards,) splintered a beam, along which it ran through the shed and ended its devastating career in the barn.

HOW PEOPLE ARE SWINDLED BY LOTTERIES. A New York editor who has ciphered out to good purpose the scheme of a lottery that is said to be "honorably conducted," finds that the chances of a person who is tempted to invest in the hope of getting a prize are exceedingly slim, while the proprietors are sure of enormous profits.—In this lottery recently drawn, there were 437 prizes ranging from 160 of $200 each, to one of $100,000, making the total amount of prizes to be distributed among ticket holders about $400,000. There were 30,000 tickets at $40 each; showing that the purchasers pay $1,200,000 for the chance of drawing $400,000, leaving the nice sum of $800,000 clear gain to the lottery, but only 437 of the 30,000 or one in 69, can get any prize, and only 44, or one in 700, can get over $500; so that those who invest $40 for one-sixty-ninth of a chance to get $200, or one seven-hundredth of a chance to draw a larger prize, show more credulity than sound judgment. This is the case with a so-called honor sale lottery, while nine-tenths of them were established for swindling and fraud.

A public meeting has been called in Montreal, the call being signed by the most influential citizens, to take measures to assist the people of Portland. When the great fire took place in Montreal in 1852, Portland contributed $3000 of $33,000 forwarded there from the United States, and hence a superior call on the gratitude of the people.

A Washington despatch says that Major John Tyler, a son of President Tyler, delivered the annual address last week at the Commencement exercises of William and Mary College at Williamsburg, Va. His subject was "Virginia and the destinies of the American people under the providence of God," and, after showing how much greater Virginia had been than New England, he declared that we are now entering upon a new era, and that Empire is the solution of history. His address was throughout abusive of New England, eulogistic of Virginia, and destitute of a loyal sentiment.

A surprising instance of superstition and ingratitude is recorded in the New York papers. A boy bathing near one of the wharves seemed about to be drowned, when he was rescued by a noble Newfoundland dog. In dragging the boy from the water by the hair, the teeth of the animal inflicted some slight scratches on the boy's head. The parents of the child immediately applied for and procured an order to have the dog killed on the ground that he would be mad, the bite might subsequently prove fatal, and he would be hanged if affected.

GAMBLING AT SARATOGA. The multiplying of gaming houses at this place from season to season has been marked, but never as much so as now. On the main street many of the second floors are taken by those who keep the gaming tables. No pains is taken to keep the business a secret. From the streets, from the piazzas of the hotels, from dawn till dark, from sundown till sunrise, Sunday brings no repose and no cessation, men can be seen under the fascination of the tables, winning or losing great sums. Some well-to-do, and some well reputed men from New York daily play with a fixed rule only to lose a certain sum. They play while they win. But when fortune is against them and their standard of loss is reached, they quit the tables. These men never drink when they play. But with all this rivalry, Morissey has been able to hold his own. He has now found a rival. A woman from New York has taken a house on the same street, where his club house is located. It is elegantly fitted up. It has a bar of choicest wines and liquors. A hop is held every night, at which men are admitted on the payment of $5. Young women, quite pretty and well dressed, parade the streets and call at the hotels, and with handsomely printed circulars call men into this new palace of dissipation. The circular holds out the price of the hops, the music, the wines, and refreshments, as does a bill of fare in a restaurant. The lady of the mansion keeps a four-in-hand team. The outfit is splendid. The horses are stately and aristocratic. A driver holds the reins, dressed in livery. Two lackeys sit behind in white coats of immense breadth, and buttons as big as half dollars, and otherwise dressed in the most aristocratic style. Alone in the open carriage, the owner sits in all her glory, and is driven up and down, in and out the town, and of course is the centre of general observation. The thing has made and will make a profound excitement there. Men have been waylaid by girls pretending to have lost their way. Men have been enticed into the house under various pretences, and the bold, defiant, open, business like way in which the house is managed strikes all with astonishment.

THE AUSTRIAN AND ITALIAN ARMIES. The movements of the Austrian army in the great European contest are kept most profoundly quiet, and correspondents of American papers, who are residing at Vienna, find the greatest difficulty in obtaining any reliable information. It is easy enough to hear reports about the Prussians, their advances and retreats; the progress of Victor Emmanuel, but not a word about the progress of the other side. Any paper which makes the slightest allusion to it is confiscated. The most stringent regulations are enforced controlling the press in these matters. With all this mystery surrounding the Austrian movements, Benedek is thought to be meditating a blow to Silesia, and that his objective point is Berlin via Breslau. The right wing of his army still extends from Olmutz to Cracow, forming the base of operations of the Austrian army, which extends in a semi-circle around Prussian Silesia. The left wing is concentrated in the valley of the Elbe, along the Saxon frontier. The main army is concentrated around the fortress of Josephstadt.

Precisely what the Austrian army is waiting for nobody seems to understand. One thing, however, is evident—that the Austrian plan is not to fight Prussia in detail—but when she is ready, to bring on a battle which shall be, if possible, a second Leipsic or Waterloo.

Notwithstanding the disgusting toadyism of Boswell Craven's book about Jeff. Davis at Fortress Monroe, that distinguished gentleman, it is said, considers himself insulted by its publication, and speaks in no very complimentary terms of the breach of confidence by the author.

There was a stormy debate at the Cabinet meeting to-day on the President's determination to veto the Freedmen's Bureau bill, and of course we have rumors of the retirement of Messrs. Harlan and Speed.

President Johnson sent to the Senate to-day a large number of army appointments.—Sp. to Boston Journal.

A St. Paul (Minn.) paper publishes facts which indicate that the cattle disease is raging among the buffalo on the northwestern prairies, numbers of these animals have been found dead, with no marks to account for the cause of death. Many cattle have also been attacked and died at Pembina, in the same state, with what is supposed to be disease identical with that now spreading through Europe.

Special Dispatch to Boston Journal.

WASHINGTON, July 10.

There is to be a caucus of Union Senators and Representatives to-night to discuss the question of adjournment. Those who have arrayed themselves in direct opposition to the President oppose any adjournment, and Mr. Forney says in his Chronicle:

"To leave the citadel unsentinelled is to leave it in a bad man's hands, who will assuredly betray it to the traitors as he meekly deserted them in 1860—purchasing by an act of final perfidy, absolution and forgiveness for what proves to have been a calculating patriotism. The good men in Congress would never forgive themselves if, when they are at home, he should perform a coup d'etat that would enable the conspirators to claim that this treason was checked by the forms of law and consummated by the agencies of a government fettered in chains forged out of its own treasury and given over to death by its own accidental executive.

What General Chamberlain Says.

All must unite in demanding security for the future. We must have guarantees good and sufficient against any future attempt to destroy this Government whether in the exercise of a pretended right by open war or BY MORE ARTFUL AND INSIDIOUS ASSAULTS against the principles on which this Nation was founded. These are points we cannot yield without danger and dishonor. But WHEN THE SOUTHERN STATES SHALL HAVE COMPLIED WITH THOSE CONDITIONS IN GOOD FAITH, they will be in a condition to ask association and fellowship with the loyal commonwealths of the country which they deserted with such violence and scorn. AT THAT TIME, in my judgment, it is wise to hold them in strict probation.

The Times of yesterday has another pompous article in reference to the Whig and Congress. We will only refer to a single point. It says:

Especially has it (Congress) no right to insist upon 'impartial suffrage' before States lately in rebellion shall be entitled to admission.

Congress has as much right to insist upon impartial suffrage before southern members are admitted, as the President had to "insist" upon the abolition of slavery, or the repudiation of the confederate debt—just as much.

It is somewhat difficult to argue with a person who affects to be in favor of establishing just and equal rights at the South, but whose favor is in reality a mere abstraction—who is in favor of the principle, but opposed to any practical measures by which it can be established. The Times well knows that impartial suffrage will never be established by the former slaveholders, unless they are in some way compelled to do it—They would never otherwise have abolished slavery. Our neighbor might as well oppose the suffrage at once as to oppose the only method by which we shall be likely ever to obtain it—a constitutional amendment directly requiring it, or so reducing southern representation, in case the freedmen are excluded from the ballot, as to present a very strong moral motive for its adoption. It is the specciousness and sophistry of the Times which makes that paper a more mischievous enemy of impartial freedom and the cause of equal rights than an open and avowed enemy could possibly be—and it is for that reason that we "insist" upon exposing it as in reality a Johnson paper, opposed at heart to the spirit and policy of freedom which Congress has endeavored to inaugurate in opposition to Presidential vetoes, but has yet been ablely partially to effect. That paper must know as well as we that the last opportunity of making the South do justice and establish freedom permanently is now passing—and that it will never do so of its own accord.

A PROPOSAL TO OFFER ANNEXATION TO THE BRITISH PROVINCES. Secretary McCulloch recently sent to the House of Representatives a report on the trade of the United States with Canada and the lower provinces. It was prepared by Thomas W. Taylor, special agent of the Treasury Department for the district of Minnesota, and contains a proposition in reference to annexation.

According to this plan the British Provinces are to be consolidated into the States of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Canada East and Canada West, and the territories of Selkirk, Saskatchewan and Columbia. All public lands and works, not sold or granted, shall vest in the United States; but all other public property shall belong to the State governments respectively. In consideration of this transfer the United States is to assume and discharge the public debt of the provinces to the amount of $85,700,000, together with an annual grant for local expenditure of $1,500,000. The new states will be further aided in the completion of their canals and railroads, and the United States will assume the expense of surveying the territorial acquisitions. This project Mr. Thomas has embodied in carefully expressed bill, which he proposes that Congress should pass as an open proposition.

A Bill authorizing the admission of States as above named was introduced into the House by Mr. Banks, on the 2d of July, a copy of which we have received. Article 8 of the bill appropriates $2,000,000 for the European & North American Railway, provided the company shall release all claims held by it as assignee of Maine and Massachusetts.

A MAINE SEA CAPTAIN CHARGED WITH BURNING HIS SHIP. The Boston Journal of Tuesday evening has a report of the examination before Commissioner Hallett of Captain William Grant of Rockland, formerly of ship Young Mechanic, on a charge of setting fire to his ship on the 10th of April last, off the coast of South America. Henry W. Paine, Esq., formerly of Harlowell, was Grant's counsel. The evidence for prosecution was as direct and positive as it could be, and, unless the witnesses were guilty of perjury, leaves no doubt of the guilt of both the captain and the owner of the vessel. The evidence for defence may alter appearances, however.

The mate of the ship, Wm. Perkins, testified that she sailed from Boston on the 5th of March; the ship was set on fire on the 10th of April, in latitude 7 16, long. 32 W, on the coast of South America; I set the fire in the fore hold in three places; it was of my own mind, but not of my own free will; efforts were made afterwards to put the fire out myself, the captain and crew, but not with any result; I first heard of the intention to fire the vessel through the carpenter about two weeks previously; I afterwards asked the captain what it meant, and he said the vessel should never go to Hong Kong; had conversations with the captain on the subject; it was, at first, proposed to run the vessel ashore at Cape St. Roque, but it was considered too dangerous; too many lives would be lost; it was afterwards abandoned; I engaged in this for my own safety, because I thought if I did not I should be made way with, for I did not think from appearances that I was safe; I judged from appearances that everything was cut and dried before leaving port; did not know either the captain or second mate before I sailed with them; thought the second mate was a very treacherous man; the captain selected the place for firing; about 20 barrels of rosin were removed for convenience; the first place was in the fore hold, and then in the galley, and in the cabin; the fire was set by myself, the captain, and second mate; there were not provisions enough to last on a voyage to a port so far distant as Hong Kong; there were only about twenty barrels of beef and pork on board, besides small stores; the vessel was not thoroughly found in rigging, being very deficient in case of accident; there were four boats on board, in very bad order when we left port; they were thoroughly repaired afterward by order of the captain."

Cross-examined—"Shipped on the Young Mechanic on the 3d of March as first mate; the crew were 18 in number; officers, crew and passengers numbered 26; about ten days out learned of the purpose to destroy the vessel by the carpenter; it was some time during the afternoon; he said he learned it from the second officer, Mr. Richardson; the same night asked the captain what was meant by the story that the vessel was not going to Hong Kong; he said it was true; he proposed to me to join in the matter; the captain gave as a reason that the vessel had always been unfortunate, had sunk money ever since she had been built, she was insured; the captain had an understanding with her owner, Wm. McCloon, that she should not go to Hong Kong; witness objected at first to have anything to do with it on account of personal loss; was assured he should lose nothing by it; afterward consented when the captain told him he was fully determined to do it, even if he run her ashore in broad daylight with yards all square."

Peter Bryson, the next witness, shipped as steward on board the Young Mechanic, for Hong Kong, on the 2d day of March; had charge of all the stores on board, except the beef and pork; the small stores were scant in quantity; on the 6th or 7th of April, at 1 o'clock at night, heard the captain ask the mate if he had the shavings and other things all ready forward, and the mate said yes; and then asked if it was to-night; the captain said no, better wait for a day or two so that they could make land easier in the boats; they were leaning over the rail at the time; did not know what they were talking about; was on the ship when she was burning; got up at five o'clock, and just afterwards heard the carpenter say the ship was on fire; threw water on the fire; but the captain said it was no use; afterwards there was a hole cut in the deck; the boats were then got out; told no one about the conversation; lived overboard until I arrived at Pernambuco; afterwards told it to Mr. Booth at New York some time in June, during the progress of the fire, after the boats were got out, I was in the cabin passing out stores; the captain and mates were the last persons on board."

A despatch of yesterday states that Capt. Grant was committed, for trial in September.

ELECTION OF SENATORS IN CONGRESS.—In the Senate Mr. Clark, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported a bill to regulate and define the time and manner of holding elections by State Legislatures for Senators in Congress. It provides:

First. That the Legislature of any State next preceding the expiration of the Senatorial term shall elect, on the 2d Tuesday of its session, a successor of the retiring Senator. The voting shall be viva voce, and the name of a person receiving a majority of the votes cast in each House shall be entered upon the journal of each House, and a joint meeting of the Houses shall be convened at twelve o'clock the following day, and if the same person is found to have received a majority he shall be declared elected: but if the same person shall not have received a majority of the votes of both Houses, or if either House shall have failed to take proceedings as required, the joint assembly shall proceed to choose viva voce, and the person receiving a majority of the votes of all the members, being present and voting, shall be declared duly elected.

Second. That when a vacancy shall exist on the opening of the session of a Legislature an election shall be held on the second day of the session, and if a vacancy shall occur during the session it shall be filled the second Tuesday after its commencement.

Third. That the Governor shall certify to such election, and the Secretary of the State countersign the certificate to the President of the Senate.

THE NECESSITY OF MAKING TREASON "ODIOUS."—We copy from a Cincinnati journal an account of a curious conversation recently held by one of its correspondents with a rebel officer. It seems to us this person's notions show how necessary it is for the future peace of the country to make treason odious, as the President well said. Here is a man who cannot see the difference between treason and loyalty; or rather, who believes, honestly and sincerely, we have no doubt, that treason is honorable and loyalty disgraceful and hateful. He does not blame a Massachusetts man for fighting against the South; he does not blame himself, a Southerner, for fighting against the North; the only traitors he knows of are the men who, in the late war, adhered to the Union, against their States, and these he will hate to the end of his life.

Now, political arguments do not reach such opinions as these, which are doubtless held by thousands of men in the Southern States. These people believe treason honorable and just, and loyalty the acme of disgrace—just as a Mormon believes polygamy to be moral, or as Murrell, the land pirate, taught his followers that horse-stealing was a meritorious act, or as Bishop Hopkins holds that slavery is righteous.

But if any latter-day prophet should teach sheep-stealing as an article of religious faith, the law would not hesitate, his belief to the contrary notwithstanding, to put him in prison the first time he carried his faith into practice; and the community—especially in a wool growing region—would strongly demand that, no matter how respectable the offender might be, or how sincerely he believed sheep-stealing to be chief of all the virtues, the thief should serve his term in state prison; not for the sake of vengeance, but as the best way to make sheep-stealing odious.

Now, treason is a crime by law, just as much as sheep-stealing; that is inculcated as a faith only makes it the more dangerous. It is as though ministers of the gospel should justify burglary as a religious duty. Because it is attempted to make treason respectable, therefore we ought to be the more stringent in punishing it according to law.

We must "make treason odious" in self-defence, for traitors are doing their best to make loyalty odious. And while such unfortunate and perilous opinions prevail to so great an extent in the country, it is of the highest importance that we shall maintain rigidly the exclusion from Congress and offices of all who are tainted with treason. There is a grave danger to the republic from any other course. There is danger of such a perversion of opinion, on a most important point of political morals, as would make republican government as impossible here as it became in Mexico. We cannot afford to Mexicanize the Union by our tolerance of treason. We must cause it to be understood that treason is a crime, that traitors are criminals, and that both are "odious" and disgraceful, and justly liable to punishment.—N. Y. Evening Post.

In the Senate, on Saturday, a bill was reported by Mr. Trumbull of Illinois, which is to deprive the President of the power to make removals of officials during the recess of the Senate, or to make appointments during the recess unless where vacancies have occurred by death, resignation or expiration of term. It is not certain that it can be passed over a veto.

Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

Read the following letter from E. Bourne, a well known citizen of Pittsburgh, Pa.

PITTSBURGH, May 10, 1866.

Messrs. Hostetter & Smith: Gentlemen—During a visit in the West last fall, I contracted chills and fever, which brought me to my bed, and finally terminated in typhoid fever, during which time I was physically so prostrated that I almost despaired of ever recovering my health, having entirely lost my appetite for food, not being able to eat a morsel, and the only thing which I was much distressed with was a reeling sensation in my head, and passed many sleepless nights—all from debility caused by my prostrate condition brought about by the fever. At this stage of my condition a friend recommended me to use your celebrated Stomach Bitters, but being morally opposed to the use of stimulants in any form, I at first declined, but afterwards yielded to my prejudices and after taking the medicine for several weeks, as directed, my appetite returned, and with it I am rapidly regaining my former vigor and strength.

My sleep (from the loss of which I had suffered much,) has never been better than it is now, and the reeling sensation (before alluded to,) has entirely left me. My bowels, which were much constipated and irregular, are now quite natural, and in fact I am glad to say that I feel myself a new man, and tender you this testimonial of my appreciation of your valuable preparation in order that others suffering as I have may avail themselves of its virtues; which prejudice prevented me from enjoying for so long a period. I may also add from my physician, after seeing the beneficial effect your Bitters had on me, recommended that I use them regularly. Yours, very respectfully,

To the Public of Bangor and Vicinity.

Having been requested, in common with others, to contribute in aid of the sufferers by the late disastrous fire in Portland, I very much regret my inability to do anything directly in behalf of so laudable an object. "My poverty and not my will consents" to saying nay, to any of my suffering brethren in this great calamity.

My residence of four years abroad, while it added but little to my pecuniary resources, has enabled me to treasure up some interesting incidents of foreign travel and observation, pertaining mainly to Spanish characteristics and scenes; embracing some sketches of Granada and the far-famed Alhambra, as well as Valencia, my particular place of abode, while in Spain. These views and observations I have embodied in the form of a poetical Lecture, occupying perhaps an hour in the delivery, which I should gladly recite publicly as a humble contribution in aid of our Portland brethren; and for this purpose would give notice that I will lecture at the City Hall, in Bangor, on Thursday next the 12th inst., at 8 o'clock P. M.

Tickets, at twenty-five cents each, or five for a dollar will for sale reasonably at the Bookstores and at the door of the Lecture Hall in the evening.

GEORGE KENT.

July 10, 1866.

P. S. Hon. A. G. Wakefield, Mayor, has kindly consented to take charge of the avails of the Lecture, for the purpose specified; to be paid over to him by the several vendors of tickets. As the object is charity to its full extent, the Lecturer will not feel at liberty to discriminate among his friends by the giving away of any complimentary tickets.

An Effectual Worm Medicine.

BROWN'S VERMIFUGE COMFITS.

Worm Lozenges. Much sickness, undoubtedly, of children and adults, attributed to other causes, is occasioned by worms. The "VERMIFUGE COMFITS" although effectual in destroying worms, can do no possible injury to the most delicate child—and this valuable combination has been successfully used by physicians, and found to be safe and sure in eradicating worms, so hurtful to children.

CHILDREN HAVING WORMS require immediate attention, as neglect of the trouble often causes prolonged sickness.

SYMPTOMS OF WORMS IN CHILDREN are often overlooked. Worms in the stomach and bowels cause irritation, which can be removed only by the use of a sure remedy. The combination of ingredients used in making Brown's "Vermifuge Comfits" is such as to give the best possible effect with safety.

WASHINGTON, July 11

The following is a call for a convention of Southern Unionists, to be held at Philadelphia in Independance Hall, the first Monday of September, 1866:

To the People of the South—

The great issue is upon us. The majority of Congress and its supporters firmly declare that the rights of the citizens enumerated in the Constitution and established by the Supreme Court, must be maintained inviolate. Rebels and rebel sympathizers assert the right of the citizen must belong to the States alone, and under such regulations as the respective States choose voluntarily to prescribe. We have seen this doctrine of State sovereignty carried out in its practical results, until all authority in Congress was denied, the Union temporarily destroyed, the constitutional rights of the citizens of the South nearly annihilated, and the land desolated by civil war. The time has now come when the structure of the Southern State government must be laid on constitutional principles, or the despotism grown up under atrocious leadership be permitted to remain. We know of no other plan than that Congress now exercise its authority to establish the principle whereby protection is made co-extensive with citizenship. We maintain that no State can ever by its legislation can make transgression on the rights of a citizen legitimate.

We demand and ask you to concur in demanding protection to every citizen of the Great Republic, on the basis on equality before the law, and further that no State government should be recognized as legitimate under the constitution, in so far as it does not by its organic law make imparted protection full and complete. Under the doctrine of State sovereignty with rebels in the foreground controlling southern legislature and embittered by disappointment in their schemes to destroy the Union, there will be no safety for the loyal element of the South.

Our reliance for protection is now in Congress and the great Union party that has stood and is standing by the nationality, the constitutions, right of the citizen and the beneficent principles of free government. For the purpose of bringing the loyal Unionists of the South into conjunction action with the true friends of republican government of the North, we invite you to send delegates in goodly numbers from the southern States, including Missouri, Kentucky, West Virginia, Maryland and Delaware, to meet at Independence Hall, in the city of Pennsylvania, on the 1st Monday of September next. It is proposed that we should meet at that time to recommend measures for the establishment of such government in the South as accords with and protects the rights of all citizens.

We trust this call will be responded to by numerous delegations of such as represent the true loyalty of the South, and that kind of government which gives full protection to all the rights of the citizens, such as our fathers intended, and we claim as our birthright.

Either the lovers of constitutional liberty must rule the nation, or rebels and their sympathizers be permitted to misrule it. Shall loyalty or disloyalty have the keeping of the destinies of the nation.

Let the responses to this call which is now in circulation for signatures, and is being numerously signed, answer.

Notice is given that gentlemen at a distance can have their names attached to it by sending a request by letter directed to D W Bingham, Esq, Washington.

[signed] W. B. Stokes, Tenn.
Joseph S Fowler, Tenn.
James Getty, Tenn.
A J Hamilton, Texas.

And 21 others.

The company has been in operation for many years, taking houses at very low rates, mostly among the middling classes, and will pay about 20 per cent. This loss will fall very severely on widows, orphans and the poor, as these classes were largely insured in it, as an assessment on their premium notes must come out of their scanty dividends.

—The great Quadruple Combination Circus and Menagerie of Messrs. Bailey & Co exhibits in our city this week on Friday and Saturday, as will be seen by advertisement. There has never been in this State so extensive and attractive an exhibition as this is represented to be—and from notices in places where it has already been, we may believe that it is really of a high order—not merely a big thing on paper, like some others that have travelled this way.

—The Universalist Society make their annual excursion to Fort Point to day.

—The alarm of fire yesterday forenoon, was occasioned by the slight burning of the Pool House on Washington street.

—The counterfeit tens of the Highland National Bank of Newburg, N Y, are circulating in this State. Look out for them.

—In Police Court yesterday, Dennis Sullivan was brought up on a charge of assault and battery on the person of his wife, convicted of the same, and sentenced to pay fine and costs amounting to $7 56, and to give bonds in the sum of $100 to keep the peace for six months.

—The yacht "Nettie," Capt Dexter H. Follett (of Boston), with a party of gentlemen aboard, arrived here this evening, after visiting Portland, Belfast, and intend continuing the cruise to Eastport, Mount Desert, &c., &c. The yacht is a beautiful specimen of naval architecture, and won the prize at the Regatta which took place at Boston on the 4th of July. We obtain this information from Mr. J. H. Selwyn, one of the party.

—Haying has commenced in this region on some of the more advanced pieces of grass. The crop will be much better than was expected the early part of the season—being in many places about up to an average. Other crops have gone ahead well during the recent warm weather. Showers have been frequent.

By the late fire, the Catholic Society lost, with the exception of St Dominic's Church, all of its churches, buildings, and charitable institutions—the new cathedral which was being erected, the Bishop's residence, the chapel, the convent, and convent schools—The Catholics of this city held a meeting in the basement of St. John's Church, last Sunday evening, to raise money to assist their Portland brethren in putting up a temporary building for Divine worship. James Tobin, Esq., acted as Chairman, and Messrs. John H. O'Loughlin and Owen McCann as Secretaries. Several hundred dollars were paid down, and a committee of six was appointed to collect in each ward during the week. The meeting then adjourned to meet again next Sunday evening, when the committees will report.—[Democrat.

—At a meeting of the Portland City Council on Monday committees were appointed to employ an architect to examine and report upon the cost of rebuilding the City Hall. Many estimate that the sum of $100,000 will replace the building, as the front walls and foundations are considered to be good. It is also proposed to have a public square and market.

THE BURNT DISTRICT. The burnt district in Portland was accurately surveyed and found to cover an area of three hundred and twenty-seven acres, so thoroughly burnt that it is believed scarcely ten cords of charred wood could be gathered from the ruins.

It is stated that some seventy children have been born on Munjoy Hill since the fire.

SHIPWRECK. On the morning of the 5th July, the ship "Picayune," of 1000 tons, Capt. Brooks, went ashore in a fog, on Duck Island, off Mt. Desert, and became a total wreck. She had been in a fog ten days.—She was built in Castine, was from New Orleans, and bound (in ballast) for St. John, N. B. Officers and crew all saved, some of them with much difficulty. We have these particulars from Capt. Dearing of steamer "City of Richmond."

GARLAND, July 10, 1866.

Messrs. Wheeler & Lynde.

In your paper of yesterday, in giving an account of the fooling at Foxcroft, on the 4th inst., mention is made of the "Titcomb" horse of Belgrade. We suppose it was not intentional in giving Belgrade credit for containing one of the fastest mage in the country, when it belonged to this town—Will you please set the matter right, so that any one (whose pile is large enough), looking for a fast nag, will not be mislead to Belgrade instead of Garland.

Yours truly,
T. P. IRISH.

—Gen. Nathaniel Norcross of Livermore, at his residence in that town on Saturday evening last, aged 74 years. He was the General in command of the Mainestroops during the Aroostook war, and has several times been a member of our Legislature.

—Henry Dow, who was so terribly assaulted by the roughs on Friday evening, last, died on Thursday morning, since which time the scoundrels who made the assault have been lodged in jail and will be sure to answer for their crime.—[Portland Argus.

—During the thunder storm on Sunday afternoon the barn belonging to Mr. [illegible] of Mt. Vernon, was struck by lightning and entirely destroyed.

Appeal from Portland.

The inhabitants of Portland, smitten by a more terrible disaster than has ever fallen upon any American town of like population, are constrained to appeal to their countrymen, whom God hath prospered, to help them in their great calamity.

The undersigned are a sub-committee, appointed by a representative committee from all the religious societies in the place, to solicit and receive contributions for the relief of our sufferers.

We would fain have waited a day or two till we could present more formal and definite statements of our losses and our wants, but already, we are cheered by many generous gifts from abroad, anticipating our appeal, and earnest inquiries come to us from our sister cities and towns, in this State and beyond, to know what we want, and what they can do to help us.

We hasten to answer respectfully but imploringly, that we need contributions of money, in large amount, and as soon as may be.

Many thousand of our people are homeless. The first necessities of food and temporary shelter we are supplied by the activity of our own citizens, and the prompt kindness of the neighboring towns, greatly aided by the use of quartermaster's stores, under the immediate and generous sanction of the Secretary of War. But every hour is revealing a thousand distressing wants, which can only be supplied by the judicious application of cash resources in large aggregate amount.

Thousands of the sufferers have not a change of clothing, nor a bed, nor a blanket. Never was a conflagration so completely destructive. Great numbers of families have nothing left. Large quantities of household goods, and other property, were removed again and again to places of supposed safety, but devoured by the flames at last.

Our hearts bleed for the aged men and women, for the many hundreds of little children, and for the helpless sick, who had to pass through the horrors of that dreadful night, and now have no homes.

We cannot exaggerate this calamity.—Sympathizing friends, who have come in from other places, declare that all rumors of the disaster were far short of the frightful reality.

Countrymen! Friends! Christians! We know that you will help us. We rely on the impulses of your patriotic brotherhood, on the mercies of your christian sympathy.

Contributions are earnestly assured that all possible care will be taken in the distribution of the bounty we may receive. All disbursements will be under the advice of a responsible general committee, representing all classes, and watching over all suffering interests. Every effort will be used to administer the supplies simply in proportion to the necessities.

Mr. Spring, one of the members of the sub-committee, will act as Treasurer of money donations.

If any persons or communities are disposed, in addition to pecuniary gifts, to contribute also breadstuffs, cured meats, shoes, cloth, or building materials, they are requested to give notice of the same to Mr. Henry Fox, Chairman of the Executive Committee of Relief, who will advise as to forwarding it.

Editors of newspapers are respectfully requested to publish this appeal.

P BARNES,
JACOB MCCLELLAN,
SAMUEL B. SPRING.

Portland, July 7, 1866

CITY OF PORTLAND,
Mayor's Office, July 7, 1866.

I earnestly commend the object of the foregoing appeal to the friendly consideration of all benevolent persons.

AUGUSTUS E STEVENS, Mayor.

BASENESS. Some females in good circumstances, who were not burned out, and who reside far from the scene of the conflagration, have had the baseness to apply to the Executive Committee for daily rations, under assumed names, and alleging that they were burned out and lost everything. They have received tickets and drawn daily rations. Yesterday some of these characters were discovered, and they were informed that if they made their appearance again they would be taken to the lock up.—[Portland Press.

—The Portland Star has the following items about the fire:

Mrs. John M. Wood removed all her elegant and cosy furniture into St Stephen's Church for safety. The building was destroyed with all its valuable contents.

Pittsburg, Pa., which suffered severely by fire many years ago, and was generously aided by New England, was among the first distant cities to offer aid to the destitute of Portland.

B F. Hibbard, who furnishes the city of Boston with oil, has tendered his services to light the streets of Portland with oil until proper arrangements can be made.

S. S Dearing is on his feet again. He has bought out E F Hamilton & Co, and will be ready for the rush in a few days.

MORE DAMAGE BY LIGHTNING. We learn from the Belfast Age that the house of Mrs. Henry McFarland of Islesboro, was struck by lightning during the shower on Sunday afternoon. The fluid rent one of the chimneys and passed down into a sleeping room, prostrating Mrs. M. who was going toward the bed, and very severely stunning her. Pieces of the plastering overhead fell upon her face, and she greatly had it been heated by the passage of the fluid, that it burned the skin quite severely. It passed out of the room, destroying both windows.

TORNADO. We are informed by a gentleman who experienced it, that a terrific shower of rain and hail, with high wind, passed over Alva and vicinity yesterday. The gentleman was obliged to alight from his carriage and hold his horse, during the passage of the storm. He says it was the most terrific shower of rain, hail and wind, with sharp lightning and heavy thunder, that he ever knew.—[Sunrise, 6th.

Officer Henry Dunbar, last week, arrested a young man named Joseph S. Robbins of this city, on suspicion of stealing a watch from Simeon Staples, and committed him to jail, where he concluded to own up, stating that he had sold the watch in Portland. Officer Dunbar took him to Portland, where the watch was found and recovered, and Robbins was found over for trial. On Friday of last week, officers Dunbar and Hadley, took a box of stove goods stolen from the Portland fire. Taking a search warrant, they found the goods, and arrested Isaac Mason of this city, who has also been bound over for trial.—[Belfast Age.

—The Richmond Press comes to us in a well-filled half-sheet of its former size. It has missed but a single day's publication since the first number was issued.—The other daily papers have also appeared regularly on half sheets for the most part. Their enterprise and determination is under the circumstances, a credit to the craft.

—There is a man in Durham—Mr. Geo. Crawford—who has had his left eye and has never lost the sight by sickness or accident. Recently, however, of a mess of potatoes he was eating, a piece of one of the potatoes got into the wrong eye, and he was four years old. So says the Lewiston Journal.

—The new and beautiful Granite church of the First Parish Society in Augusta was dedicated on Thursday evening of last week. The opening prayer was by Rev Mr. Adams of Vassalboro; portions of scripture were read by the Rev. Benj. Tappan of Norridgewock; the sermon by the pastor was from I Kings 9th chapter 3d verse; Rev. E. B. Webb, D D. of Boston, made the dedicatory prayer, and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. John Dinsmore.

—THE GILMAN WILL CASE. In the case of the will of the late Nathaniel Gilman of Waterville, which was admitted to probate in this county some time since, the court allowed to the widow (he of sum $75,000 from the estate. From this decision an appeal was made to the Supreme Court, and at the recent session of the Law Term of the same in this city, the sum of $55,000 was allowed.—[Farmer.

Quite a large number of workmen, Irish in particular, have struck for higher wages. Most, if not all of these are receiving daily supplies from the city. It is particularly requested of all employers, that if any such cases are among their men, they will immediately leave the names and residences of such strikers with the Executive Committee, at the armory of the Mechanic Blues, Market Hall, and the supplies of all such will be cut off forthwith.—[Press.

A BUSINESS CARD. The leading business men of Portland publish the following card:

With no opportunity for that concert of action which might have been secured by a public meeting of our business men, the undersigned in behalf of the merchants of Portland beg leave to submit a brief statement as to their ability to meet the wants of the trade since the fearful conflagration, which visited our city on the 4th inst. Although our city has suffered severely, the wholesale interest has been spared to a remarkable degree. Not a single jobbing house in the Grocery line has been disturbed. The other branches were more unfortunate, but the fire commencing so far from the business centre, ample time was given for the removal of goods, and the principal houses are now ready to receive and fill orders as usual.

Probably we do not realize to its full extent the greatness of our loss, but we can assure you that the business men of Portland have no thought of yielding. If sad, they are also hopeful and earnest, and confidently appeal to the business men of Maine to stand by them in this hour of trial.

RECONSTRUCTION. In addition to the contracts already mentioned, we hear of the following intentions to build immediately—Deering heirs, stores, on the corner of Exchange and Middle streets; Canal National Bank, Leonard Billings, block of brick buildings on Cumberland, from Franklin to Quincy lane; Charles E Beckett, store on corner Congress and Franklin; Capt Chas. Richardson, dwelling house on Cumberland near Pearl; G Gwin, two brick dwellings corner Cumberland and Boyd; Mrs Haggett, two houses on Smith street.—[Press.

—The Bath people are repairing and making roads with crushed stone, as we see by The Times of that city. They have a machine which crushes eighty tons a day.

—The Press says that about eight miles of streets and lanes were swept over by the great fire.

COMING HOME.

It was a bitter cold night; one of those times, happily infrequent in this latitude, when everything, animate and inanimate, seemed to shrink and cower in the intense cold. The very air was full of icy particles, which one was forced to draw in with every breath; and when the moon rose, round and clear and bright, and the wind came up with it, penetrated every crack and crevice, no matter how minute. The passengers by the night express, gathered closer to the stove, croaking and jostling each other, as even well-dressed people will sometimes do, in their efforts to keep warm.

All but one man who sat in a seat by himself near the door. A tall man, wrapped in an overcoat of army blue, the visor of his cap drawn low over his eyes—deep, dark eyes with a strange expression in them—such eyes as a man might have who had been fated to stand for a time on the borders of hell, and having seen, must bear with him through life the memory of its horrors.

He sat there quietly enough, taking little heed apparently of what was going on about him. All the afternoon he had sat so seldom moving, not speaking, only once when he had given up his seat near the fire to a poor-looking woman with a child in her arms, and himself taken this one father sick, and tpe passengers, noticing the little act of politeness and observing his dress as well, decided that he was a soldier on his way home; a veteran, probably, and then dropped him out of their thoughts.

And while the hours of early evening wore away, the train thundered on over miles and miles of level prairie; past farm houses, nestled down among trees and barns, and corn cribs; past little groups of dwellings, with their home-lights shining cheerily out.

The man by the window watched them as they flitted by, an eager, hungry look coming into his eyes. Was he thinking of a house at the end of his journey, where the lamps were lighted by this time, and three faces sad enough now, would grow suddenly bright at his coming? I do not know.

The conductor came in presently, bringing a little of the keen outer air with him. He paused with his hands on the back of the seat in which the soldier sat, smiling down into the gloomy eyes lifted to his face as he said, cheerfully:

'We shall be at M., in eleven minutes. You're almost home, sir.'

'Yes, thank God!'

Home! Did conductor Hines know all that word meant to the man sitting there so quietly? He thought he did; thought he could understand his feelings, for he himself had served three years as a soldier, and well remembered the homesickness, the weary waiting, the longing that grew almost insupportable sometimes for one glimpse of dear faces left behind.

Something of this he said in his earnest way, still standing there, his hand on the back of the seat. The soldier grasped it and the two looked steadily into each other's eyes.

Two faces so very unlike. One pleasant to look upon, though shadowed a little by the cares and responsibilities of middle life. The other showing warm and white under the lamplight, gray hair about the temples, lines upon the forehead, deep lines around the mouth; the face of an old man—and yet he was but thirty. His very voice had a curious, unnatural tone in it as he said, still keeping fast hold of the friendly hand, still looking into the kindly eyes, 'It's three years since I saw my family, two since I heard from them. I have been a prisoner eighteen months at Salisbury.'

What a story was outlined in these few words—only outlined—the details will never be known till the great day of Remembrance when the secrets of all prison houses shall be revealed, and the black record of Southern cruelty be shown up to the gaze of angels and men—Eighteen months! They had done the work of eighteen years on the once powerful frame of this man whose whole heart seemed centered now on the one thought of going Home.

Home! Who can tell how blessed memories of it had steadied the soldier's brain and kept him from madness during those days, and weeks, and months of lingering torment when hope and courage and manly fortitude alike gave way before the horrors of the situation, and brave men who had looked death in the face many a time without blanching, shrank now when it came in the form of slow starvation. But they had lived through it—some of them—this Mark Ryder among the rest.

He stood now on the platform of the car as the train stopped alongside a low-roofed, dingy little building, dignified by the name of a station. The station-master stood there with his lamp in his hand, and beside him a man and a boy waiting to get on the train. The man did not glance once at them, nor at the twinkling lights from a group of a dozen houses on a hill-side near at hand, though he had many friends there when he went away. He was looking off across the bare fields to where a mile away a single light gleamed as a star.

'Coralie's up yet. Like enough she's thinking of me this minute;' voice and hand both trembled with excitement as he turned up the collar of his overcoat for protection against the wind that came sweeping, bitterly cold, across this bit of open country.

A friendly hand was laid on his shoulder as he turned away and a friendly voice said, 'Good night, comrade. God give you a happy home-coming.' Then the hand was gone from his shoulder, the train flashed on, and the soldier struck out cheerfully across the fields, steering straight for the light which still glowed steadily in the distance. The air was still biting cold, but he did not feel it. How should he when his heart was aglow?

'It's early yet, hardly eight. I shall find them all up. Dear Coralie! what will she say, I wonder.'

No shadow of doubt or fear dimmed the eager joy of anticipation; no thought of change. And yet two years is such a long, long time. This was his home he was coming to, his and Coralie's, and Coralie loved him. It was Coralie he thought of, always. Coralie.

How familiar the old gate looked, and the bars beyond. He would not go in that way, though; the gate used to creak he remembered, and he wanted to surprise them—wanted, too, to get one look at them all before the made his presence known. The shades were up and the light shone full in his eyes as he approached the window, stepping lightly that no footfall might betray him. Nearer and nearer till he stood close to the sill.

What a pleasant room it was, with its pretty carpet and burnished stove, and the pictures on the walls. A little boy sat with book and slate beside the lamp. That was Eddie, studious Eddie; and the pink-cheeked child who leaned on his knee was the baby Floy. A young woman sat in a rocking-chair before the stove, a fair young woman with Coralie's face and smile and Coralie's bands of dark hair.

But who was the man beside her, who held her hand in such abandon, lover-like way, and even bent down and kissed her, right there in the broad light before the children—before the very eyes of the husband whose presence none of them suspected? In God's name, what did it mean?

Mark Ryder's hand clenched as he took one step towards the door, but stopped as a voice thrilled to his heart, as it had done so many times before, saying, 'Come Floy, Eddie, it's time little folks were in bed.'

The younger came obediently, and the man standing outside saw this other man catch her out of the mother's arms and swing her high above his head, while the little one laughed and shouted in glee, and Coralie said pleadingly, 'Please don't, husband; it makes me afraid to see you throw her up so.'

Husband!

The mystery was growing clearer now. The moonlight fell upon a white, convulsed face, and the angels, seeing it, must have pitied the man. There was none other to pity; no kindly human face or voice, only the remembrance of the conductor's face, which stayed by him somehow, and the words that, curiously enough, recurred to his mind now—'God give you a happy Home-coming.'

He uttered no syllable of reproach, only the words that were almost a cry, 'Oh, Coralie! Coralie!'

As if in answer she turned toward the window; but the figure that had stood there was gone now.

Even in this moment of bewilderment and torture, the wronged husband saw clearly how the wrong had been done. He had been reported dead, and Coralie, a timid, dependent woman always, had married again. She had been married many months—his eyes told him that—and he could not bring shame and disgrace on her. Another train would pass in two hours. He would take it and go far away, back to the army, perhaps, anywhere, it did not matter, and she should never know but that he was really dead. It would be best so.

Oh! Coralie, if you had only known whose eyes looked upon you that night whose unselfish heart was planning for you, placing your future peace and well-being before his own craving hunger for home, happiness and children's love.

When Mark Ryder glanced again towards the window the strange man had moved aside, out of his range of vision, and he saw only Coralie sitting there with Floy in her lap, while Eddie leaned on the arm of her chair. Home, and wife, and children—all that he had hoped and prayed for through three years of war and eighteen months of captivity, before his eyes, within his reach at last! I think none but God knew what was in the man's soul then, when he gave them all up, and elected to become a wanderer. One long look at the dear faces he should never see again this side of Heaven—then he turned resolutely away.

He had his hand on the fence to get over, when a dog came out of a kennel near by, growling savagely. 'Bruno, good fellow!' Hearing his name in that voice, the dog knew his master and sprang up with a quick, glad whine, licking the hand that caressed his shaggy head, and the face that bent down close for an instant, as the man knelt on one knee on the frozen ground, his arm about the dog's neck.

'You will see them all to-morrow, old fellow—Coralie and Eddie and baby Floy—but I shall never see them again till I meet them up yonder. They'll never know that I've been here to-night, and you can't tell them, can you? You'll keep the secret, and when all the rest have forgotten me, my dog will remember. No, you mustn't follow. Back, I say, and good-bye.'

He did not look back once as she went—kept straight on across the fields towards the station, in the same path he had come over less than an hour before. The wind was in his face now, that bitter, piercing wind which seemed to penetrate the blue overcoat so easily, chilling him through and through. He shivered at first, and shrank, as it swept over him, but after awhile he did not feel its chilling blasts so much.

It must be getting late, he thought; he was growing very sleepy—walking slower and slower, pausing once as the mournful howl of a dog fell on his ear. 'Poor Bruno! how of a dog fell on his ear. 'Poor Bruno! how of a dog fell on his ear.' Nobody else knows Nobody else'll grieve. Nobody else knows or cares. It's strange—what makes me so tired. I must—sit down—rest—and rest. There's—time—enough. No—need—to hurry. Coralie's—asleep—by—this—time—and I—leaning his elbows on his knees and his face in his hands, he sat quiet. Not asleep, for he still heard the barking of the dog, but it sounded to him miles and miles away. His senses were getting dulled, his faculties benumbed.

An hour passed—two—then the shriek of a locomotive broke the stillness, startling the echoes far and near. But Mark Ryder did not move. Had he forgotten that he meant to take the train? When daylight came he was sitting there still!

Later in the morning Coralie's husband, coming down through this very field, paused at the sight of a man in uniform, sitting there in that dejected attitude.

'Are you sick, sir?' Can I help you in any way?' But the soldier did not look up or speak.

A strange fear fell upon the questioner. He came nearer and gently lifted the sleeper's head, pushing back the cap that shaded the white forehead and the closed eyes.

'Dead! Frozen to death, with help so near! This is terrible!'

No slightest glimmering of the truth dawned upon his mind. He had never seen Mark Ryder, and to a stranger's eyes this pale face, turned up meekly to the winter's sky, bore little resemblance to the picture he had seen Coralie kiss. So he called a neighbor, and between them, with reverent touch, they lifted the poor, pallid image of what had been a strong, loving man, and bore it to the nearest house. And the news spread that a dead soldier, a stranger evidently, a passenger from one of the night trains was lying at Dr. Purcell's house, awaiting a coroner's inquest.

What impulse was it that prompted Coralie, when she heard of it, to take her two little ones by the hand and go down there? Her husband met her at the door with an awe-struck face. Some one who had known Mark Ryder had recognized the body, and one after another of his old neighbors, crowding near, recognized it too. They would have kept her away then, but she only said, 'I must see it,' and putting away their detaining hands, stepped into the room.

In spite of grey hairs, in spite of worn features and altered looks, she knew him instantly.

She did not faint nor cry out—just knelt down beside the low bed where they had laid him, and dropped her head on his shoulder, and kissing the cold lips that would never warm under the pressure of hers, calling him by his name—'Mark, Mark, my love!' my husband!' and the neighbors standing there lifted up their voices and wept.

In his pocket they found his papers—transportation ticket and discharge—and in his knapsack the gifts he had bought for his dear ones: a shawl for Coralie, a music-box for Eddie, and a doll for baby Floy. The gifts had reached their destination, but alas! not their giver.

O! true heart, strong for the right, tender and faithful unto death, do you know, in that Better Country in which you dwell, how one walks the earth, lonely for the sake of you, longing only for the time when this mortal shall put on immortality, and the little household band be gathered an unbroken circle once more?

State of Maine.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Augusta, June 6, 1866.

To Municipal Authorities:

A CONSTRUCTION has been placed upon the applications for State Pension, to which it is perhaps liable, though by no means intended, (as will appear by the instructions accompanying the blanks,) that every party applying shall declare himself a pauper. To correct this, in all cases in which persons applying are not receiving aid, either public or private, the third paragraph of the application signed by the proposed beneficiary, which declares the inability in the second line, should be changed by striking out the words "am," "and," and "continue to," so that line will read "obtain a livelihood for myself and those dependent upon me, and shall be compelled to," &c.

The object of this law is to relieve those who may be paupers, and prevent others from becoming so, and will be so administered.

EPHRAIM FLINT, Secretary of State.

This Company, organized on a permanent basis, with Dr. Courtaret, the celebrated French Chemist, in charge of its Laboratory, is prepared to furnish its Disinfecting Fluids for sick rooms, nurseries, urinals, water closets, privies, cesspools, sewers, gutters, ships, railroads, hospitals, prisons, and public institutions of all kinds, slaughter-houses, tallow and fat-boiling establishments; all kinds of manufactories necessarily increasing the value of the latter to every farmer), and wherever poisonous and offensive gases exist. These agents are deodorizers, antiseptics, antiputrescents, and disinfectants in the scientific meaning of the words. They remove noxious gases and fetid exhalations by chemical principles—leaving in their places healthful air; they are DESTROYERS, and not merely absorbents of poisonous gases—not injurious to the cases in which they are used. The attention of medical and scientific men is directed to the numerous certificates attached are testimonials in favor of this great discovery, which, with hundreds of others, can be seen at the Company's office.

Liver Complaints, Scrofula or King's Evil, Eruptions, and all Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Salt Rheum, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches and Boils; Rheumatic and Neuralgic Pains in the Bones, Side and Head; for the various Weaknesses to which Females are liable; Dyspepsia, Debility, Emaciation, Dropsy, and all diseases resulting from or in an impure state of the Blood.

It is invaluable to Nervous Sufferers, and a positive cure for Palsy arising from the abuse of Mercury or Lead.

It is a Tonic as well as an Alterative, and a sure protection from attacks that originate in change of climate, season or life.

LIVER COMPLAINTS and their combined symptoms, such as Lumbago, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Bilious Eruptions, &c. When caused by Scrofula taint, this compound is a most effectual remedy.

DYSPEPSIA or INDIGESTION is often caused by Scrofula, which deranges the stomach, and renders it unhealthy. Indigestion is not always caused by Scrofula, when it is, this Sarsaparilla Compound is a speedy cure.

NEURALGIA, HEADACHE and various disorders of the nervous system frequently arise from a low state of the constitutional health, and are much relieved and often cured by this powerful remedy.

DR. KNIGHTS'
Oriental Hair Restorer.

After a long series of experiments, this article, as it is now offered to the public, is believed to be the most perfect of its kind which science has ever devised. No, which have been spared to produce what has so long been demanded by thousands, who, from sickness or other causes, have become prematurely grey; and others, who, in the acme and vigor of life, would return, as far as possible, the semblance of youth. DR. KNIGHTS' ORIENTAL HAIR RESTORER, after a few applications, restores grey or faded hair to its original color, and is the only preparation of the kind upon which the public can place any reliance. It has never been known to fail in a single instance, and is totally unlike the thousand and one so-called Hair Restorers, by which so many have been egregiously deceived.

It is delightfully perfumed, gives the hair a rich and glossy appearance, promotes its luxuriant growth, and will not soil the skin, scalp, or any article of apparel.
